St. Louis to Colorado via Wichita.

Commencing Sunday, July 13,1890, the Missouri Pacific railway will run through sleeping cars from St. Louis via Pleasant Hill, Rich Hill, Fort Scott and Wichita to Geneseo and from the man opposing and Denver. This change was made on account of a great many people from the east going to Colorado being desfrous of going via Wichita. The train will stop here two hours, giving all a chance to view the "Peerless Princess" and chance to view the "Peerless Princess" and still land passengers in Colorado same time as if they had gone via Kansas City. It also gives the citizens of Wichita sleep-ing car service from here to Colorado. Re-turning, it gives us through sleeping car service Wichita to St. Louis, and gives the Colorado people a chance to go east via Wichita. This change will undoubtedly be appreciated by the traveling public, and especially by the citizens of Wichita. If you are going east or west go via the popespecially by the citizens of Wichita. If you are going east or west go via the popular new through route. Through chair and sleeping car service. New route just completed between Fort Scott and Rich Hill goes through the finest mineral and agricultural country in the west. Don't forget the new short line to St. Louis or Colorado.

FOR THE ENTERTAINMENT AND IN-STRUCTION OF GIRLS AND BOYS.

Experiment of the Two Little Hohenzollerns While Out for a Canter on Their Matchless White Ponies One Fine Summer Afternoon.

The elder two of Emperor William's sons show as yet little of their imperial father's cold and domineering disposition. In their friendliness they much more resemble their gentle grandfather, the late Emperor Frederick. One afternoon, tells a writer in Wide Awake, the two little Hobenzollerns were out for a canter when they came on a peasant lad, well mounted, who was galloping by. The crown prince immediately touched up his spirited little steed, and springing forward tried to outride the country boy, but all in vain. The latter, with the true spirit of Hessian independnce, so urged on his beast that he soon shot ahead; then turning round he waved his cap in the air to the royal lads on the snowy ponies and vanished out of sight. Friedrich Wilhelm was manly enough to take his discomfiture in good humor, and courteous enough to return the salutation of the stranger with smiles of admiration,

THE PRINCES AND THEIR IMPERIAL PATHER. After a long ride the princes were hurrying home, when suddenly they encountered an old Hessian peasant woman carrying a monstrous collection of dried brushwood on ber back, which so covered her that her figure was scarcely to be perceived. "Ach," exclaimed Prince Eitel to his brother, "look yonder. Fritz, the forest is moving. There is certainly a marchen (fairy) here." But as they approached nearer the old peasant woman, peering out beneath the dried wood, dropped her load and stood before the boys, her old careworn face all before the boys, her old careworn face all aglow, her eyes filling with tears of loyal affection and her lips murmuring endless blessings on their fair young heads. The boys, laughing at their childish fears and funny mistake, begged to be allowed to empty their joint tiny purses into the trembling oalm of the poor wood gatherer, and this done they galloped off to the castle, having proved themselves to be the genuing. "markers" The nicture here genuine "marchen." The picture here presented of the two little princes on their white ponies and the Emperer William is from a recent painting by the distinguished artist M. Lubke, and originally reproduced in this country for the benefit of The

A Curious Story of a Frog. In a tank in the museum of the New York hospital, tells a correspondent in Harper's Young People, were kept a frog, seven turtles and a young alligator, the latter being about ten inches long. This mixed family got along very smoothly during the winter. The freg perched him-self on the top of a piece of wood that floated in the tank. At night the little turtles and the baby alligator would settle themselves beside the freg, and slip into No advance in prices. Sale of seats commences Tuesday, November 4, at 9 a.m. the water again for the day. During the entire winter the frog never moved, but sprawled on the stick, bis eyes pointing sprawled on the stick, his eyes pointing straight up; nor did he all the time taste a morsel of food. But toward the end of May he slipped from the bit of wood, and took his place at the bottom of the tank. Shortly after this, one of the hospital officials looked into the tank, and found there only six turtles instead of seven. Each day there was one less, until only one turtle remained. At this point a watch was kept, and this is what was seen The frog was in his place, perfectly motionless, and the turtle was going round and round looking for its lost friends. At settled itself for the night. Then the frog was seen to give a bound swift as lightning, and to compose himself again in his notionless attitude. But no turtle was to be seen. The frog had fairly jumped outside of the turtle. Nothing now remained except the frog and the alligator. One except the frog and the alligator. One morning it was discovered that the alligator was missing. "There," said some one, "the frog isn't the thief this time, that's sure." "Isn't he, though?" replied Professor Ferguson. "Look here?" There was the frog, sitting back, and contorted in the most comical way. Out of his mouth hung about two inches of the alligator's hung about two inches of the alligator's tail and part of the head. He had with nice precision seized it by the middle when it was performing some graceful curve.

Sensible Suggestions About Sleep Dr. C. E. Fitz Gerald is authority for the following plain statements and practical advice about sleep: Sleep, to be refresh-ing, ought to be dreamless. During sleep the reason is in abeyance, and it has been suggested that dreams are the result of the reasoning or controlling center of the brain being asleep while the imaginative part is awake. During healthy sleep the brain is in an amemic or comparatively bloodless condition, and alceplesaness is often caused by an undue supply of blood to the head, as when the feet are cold or the brain is excited. Delicate and nervous people should avoid toward night brain work or anything likely to increase the flow of blood to the head, such as deep or sensa-tional reading, or any other excitement, pleasurable or the reverse, and should try to promote equable circulation. Sleep may often be promoted by brisk friction of the feet or a hot water bottle, or even by standing up, walking about the room, or even sitting upright, for in all these positions the blood tends to gravitate away from the brain to the lower extremities. Those who suffer from a feeble cir-culation should always have a hot water bottle at their feet at night; to the very young, the aged, and the feeble, warmth is almost as essential as food. The duration of the sleep should be noted accurately, for there is no point on which ideas differ more than as to what constitutes a good night, some persons considering they have had a bad night if they wake once or twice and expecting eight or nine hours consecu-tive sleep, while others are satisfied with the necessary minimum of six hours. If any noise has to be endured at night, such as ticking of a clock or hammering, sleep, which otherwise seems hopeless, may sometimes be induced by counting the sounds.

How to Use Hot Water.

One of the simplest and effectual means of relieving pain is by the use of hot water, externally and internally, the temperature varying according to the feelings of the patient. For bruises, sprains and similar accidental hurts it should be applied im-mediately, as hot as can be borne, by means of a cloth dipped in the water and laid on the wounded part, or by immersion, if convenient, and the treatment kept up till relief is obtained. If applied at once the use of hot water will generally prevent, nearly if not entirely, the bruised flesh from turning black.

For pain resulting from indigestion, and known as wind colic, etc., a cup of hot water taken in sips will often relieve at once. When that is insufficient a fiannel folded in several thicknesses, large enough to fully cover the painful place, should be wrung out of hot water and laid over the seat of the pain. It should be as hot as the skin can bear without injury, and be renewed every ten minutes, or oftener if it feels cool, until the pain is gone. The remedy is simple, efficient, harmless and with-in the reach of every one, and should be more generally used than it is.

The Man Who Says "Fool."

I shudder when I ponder upon the final judgment of the man who, when he hears that a fellow man has gone astray, shrugs his shoulders and sneers, "Fool!" who, when he hears that another has encountered a terrible temptation, resisted until nature herself gave out, exhausted, and then at the very last bas yielded to it and plunged headlong into forbidden pleasures, again hisses, "Fool!" who, when he hears that another is the victim of some terrible passion, burning. unconquerable, stronger than death itself, and before which one day he sinks like a beast on the plain, cries out only.

I pity the heart that never aches and the eyes that never grow wet at the tale street of another's downfall or ruin, while I think there is something brutal and inhuman about one who can sneer at a long, terrible struggle between the body and the soul. And I have more respect for the man who, having sinned, flees and gives up everything, letting all know his dishonor, than I have for the man who sins and wears a mask through which the eyes of the world cannot pierce. Yet this same world calls the latter an "upright man" and the former Some of you "upright" onesbe careful how you sneer at the "fool."
